A collection of traditional Native American crafts is displayed on a light-colored, textured surface. On the left, two large feathers are shown: one with a dark brown and white patterned vane, and another with a lighter brown and white pattern. Below the feathers are four beaded necklaces, each with a different pattern of black, white, and brown beads. To the right of the necklaces is a wooden paddle with a large, rounded head made of brown fur or hide, and a long, straight wooden handle. The paddle's head is decorated with a small, colorful beaded tassel. To the right of the paddle is a wooden staff with a long, straight handle and a large, rounded head made of brown fur or hide. The staff's head is decorated with a small, colorful beaded tassel.
